Description: Screensavers are icons that show little images or animations that run when you turn your computer off. Some of them show a wonderful scene, some of them put you in a dreamland and some of them just give you a smile. But in all cases, the screensaver stands for your computer. The most popular screensavers are still the 3D screensavers, which produce special effects while they run. 3D images are more realistic than the standard screensavers, but it does take more time to change them. If you do not have time to wait, it is not a problem, because you can have 3D screensavers with only one simple click. However, screensavers can be used to protect your computer from viruses and harmful programs. In this article, you will learn how to use screensavers, how to choose a good screensaver and how to use autoclock. First, you will have to know that there are screensavers for every situation. Some of them can work with any type of computer and some of them are very specific to a certain operating system. Many screensavers have options that allow you to choose the background for the screensaver and to customize it. Some of them have options that allow you to change the size of the image that is displayed on your screen. If you want a screensaver that will make your computer look neat and new, you should get a screensaver that shows a nice 3D effect. In this case, you will have to have Windows or Mac software that is compatible with your graphic card. If you want to use a screen saver with an animation, you should get a 2D screen saver. A screensaver is good when you are not using your computer. Most of the time it will be turned off and it is a good way to protect your computer from viruses and other harmful programs. AutoChange Screensaver is a screensaver changer. It will allow you to download and install your favorite free screensavers directly from the program without the need to open a web browser.
